The Territory Bank

In the everyday world we usually deal exclusively with form. This tendency is especially so when we try to decide what we want for ourselves. We each have our own set of preferences for the form that we'd like to have. And little by little, bit by bit, we amass the cash to make sure we can get what we think we need. It all gets down to the money, honey: stack it in bills, track it in columns, pack it up in portfolios. And then you have to invest what you have to make even more, to provide for the future, to pay for the past, to support all your present needs.

Now maybe that's fine as far as it goes, but how far is that, just ask yourself (how far is that?). Where does form originate from and where does it go when it finally subsides? The empty side, wherever that is, you've heard the rumors already I'm sure, those Buddhist guys have been yakking for years, though they never tell you where it is except that it isn't anywhere here. But still, you know, it's certainly true that form is only emptiness (and emptiness is only form). So. If you want to spend your time investing in form, you probably should find a way to invest in emptiness too... Wow! This could cause some problems, right? I mean you can get the form part, fine, that's here, it's easy to grasp. But this emptiness: how do you find it, where do you look, how do you know when you actually have it? And how could you possibly ever know the best way to invest in it?

Luckily you're not alone. The Territory Bank is here, ready and willing to invest for you on the empty side. And you are going to need some help with this: investing in the emptiness, it's not that easy, take my word, just think how hard it is right now to invest on the side of form! Getting your money working for you, it's tough to do. And you can see that stuff, well actually not, it's mostly numbers, but never mind, you can count it, right? Well maybe not that easily, keeping track of such things is hard. Anyone with any smarts (like you for instance) knows they need to find someone else to help them invest, a financial adviser, someone who knows the way to wheel and deal in the world of form. And if you need investment help to work with the form, you really, really desperately need someone to help with the empty side.

All that emptiness just sitting there wherever it isn't, it can get to you, it really can. But there's no need to worry, none at all. Just come on in to The Territory Bank with all your empty needs. We have safe deposit, savings and loans, investment help with portfolios; it's exactly the same as a regular bank, except that it's done on the empty side, so it's completely different. Some of our apparatus might seem to be unique. You may be dismayed when you see the way our safe is displayed. You can look right in, you can peer right through! Don't be confused by what you see, on the empty side our safe is as safe as a safe can be! It's an empty safe and what you decide to keep inside will become empty too, gradually, so you can't expect the safe to look like it usually would. Though it actually isn't completely empty. When we built the safe we used a bit of form to keep it connected to the world we know, merely a bookkeeping procedure really so we don't lose track of the interest accrued, and you wouldn't want to lose that now would you?

Visit one of our various branches: the one at the Boater's Café comes to mind. Speak with one of the various members of our very varied staff. They have all been trained to some degree and are eagerly waiting to help you find the empty service that is best for you. Want to start a portfolio? You'll need to fill out a questionnaire to determine the level of risk you can hold. Want to invest on the empty side to bring in an annuity of happiness later on? Perhaps some fame? Or maybe you have a tendency to speculate on dharma futures? It could just be you merely want to raise a bit of consciousness to save for a rainy day. No problem! All you really have to do is leave a little bit of form in one of our safe deposit boxes. Interest will be paid to you on the empty side, and whatever that emptiness becomes it will surely arise eventually in the world of form. How long will it take? What form will it be? Why ask! What we're dealing with is emptiness here and it's much more exciting to just sit back and let your investment to mature.

And what does all this cost you ask? Absolutely nothing! The Territory Bank never deducts even the smallest, tiny bit of the emptiness you might attract. How could we? There are no amounts on the empty side, it doesn't work that way. Nevertheless, we do okay. Lots of useful things arise whenever consciousness is applied and sufficient resources are pooled, especially empty ones. It all comes down to dsael I guess, a practice in the emptiness. We can't say more, we won't say less.
